BACKGROUND INFORMATION:

The U.S.
began normalization with Cuba in December 2014:

- 53 political prisoners in Cuba were released in the beginning.
- However, many of those who refused to self exile themselves were soon re-arrested.
- Prisoners are forced to work 12-hour days and punished if they do not meet production quotas.
- The Ladies in White, a group of women who every Sunday after mass would silently march to press for the release of their loved ones have been routinely harassed, beaten and arrested.
- Currently, the Cuban government used a new tactic against the Ladies in White by detaining them before Sunday mass and then release them a day or so later so as to prevent them from their Sunday silent protest.
- Independent journalists, writers, academics and artists who expressed their thoughts are subject to arrests, smear campaign and termination of their jobs.
- Even reporting on the weather has become dangerous. Journalists Maykel Gonzalez Vivero and Carlos Alejandro Rodriguez were detained on trying to report on the arrival of Hurricane Irma this year. Last year, they and Elaine Diaz and four of her colleagues were detained for reporting on the damages from Hurricane Matthew with Vivero being imprisoned for three days.
- Since late last year, U.S. diplomatic personnel and their family members have experienced "hearing loss, dizziness, headache, fatigue, cognitive issues and difficulty sleeping" according to the U.S. State Department. Although Cuba denied it, it is suspected that Cuba had used some type of sonic attacks on the U.S. diplomats and their family.
